

Name of Mark	Sample	Required?	Details
Name of Car Manufacturer		No	For new cars, the top line normally has the manufacturer of the car. Presumably, this is only present on OEM windshields. This is apparently all letters (not the funky car manufacturer logo), but can be in the normal font for the car manufacturer.
Name/Logo of Glass Manufacturer	 	US [Z26.1996]	This mark identifies the manufacturer, by their name and/or logo ("the manufacturer's distinctive designation or trademark"). Common glass manufacturers include ASahi and Nippon Safety.
Brand Name of Glass		No	Often, the trademark name of the glass is present. This includes Temperlite , Lamisafe , Lamipane , and more.
AS Number		US [Z26.1996]	The AS number stands for American Standard, and is "AS" (or "American Standard") followed by a number indicating the position in which the glass may be used, based on its optical quality. AS1 is the clearest glass (at least 70% light transmission), is laminated, and can be used anywhere in a motor vehicle (typically just the windshield), AS2 is tempered with at least 70% light transmissions, and can be used anywhere except the windshield, and AS3 can be used in certain locations in certain vehicles (and can be laminated or tempered, and has less than 70% light transmission). There are higher numbers used for other purposes, but are not normally encountered in cars. This number must be near the manufacturer's name/logo, preferably below it (per Z26.1996).
M Number		US [Z26.1996]	The M number is a model number for the piece of glass, which identifies the type of construction. The M number is unique to the manufacturer, so one an M number of M312 by one manufacturer could be different than glass labeled as M312 by another manufacturer. It identifies the glass construction, including the color and thickness. An M number may be used by multiple part numbers.
DOT Code		US [FMVSS205 6.2]	The DOT code (DOT number) is the letters "DOT" followed by a number that the Department of Transportation (National Highway Traffic Safety Administration) assigns to the manufacturer of the glass. This is required by FMVSS205 section S6.2. If you have a DOT code, we have a page that lists all known DOT codes .
E Code		Yes, in EU	The E code (with a capital 'E') is used for cars in European countries, and indicates the country that certified the windshield. It is a circle with the capital letter E followed by a number.
